BEHIND THE JOB: Aged-Care Technology Coordinator

🔍 What do they do?

Aged-Care Technology Coordinators help older adults and aged-care services make the most of digital tools. They support the use of health-monitoring devices, communication platforms, care-management software, and assistive technologies. They work in residential aged-care homes, disability services, community care, and tech-support organisations.

🔍 What are their strengths?

- Tech confidence and problem-solving
- Patience and clear communication
- A passion for supporting older adults

📖 How do they get started?

Start with a VET qualification such as a Certificate III or IV in Individual Support, Aged Care, or IT support. Short courses in digital health or care-tech systems can help you specialise and progress into digital-health or training roles.
