BEHIND THE JOB: Process Technician (Pharma)

What do they do?

Process Technicians in pharmaceuticals operate and monitor production equipment, ensuring medicines are manufactured safely, efficiently, and to quality standards. They work with automated systems, follow strict procedures, and support the production of vaccines, tablets, and other pharmaceutical products.

What are their strengths?

- Technical and mechanical skills
- Attention to detail and adherence to procedures
- Ability to work in a regulated, safety-focused environment

How do they get started?

Most start with a Certificate III or IV in Process Manufacturing or a related VET qualification. On-the-job training is common, with opportunities to specialise in areas like quality assurance or production management.
